

The Data Privacy Framework (DPF) is a voluntary framework that allows U.S. companies to transfer personal data from the United States to the United Kingdom. The DPF is designed to provide a high level of protection for personal data, comparable to the standards set by the European Union's General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR). Companies that join the DPF are required to adhere to a set of principles and practices that ensure the privacy and security of personal data. For more information, visit www.dataprivacyframework.gov/

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) is the U.S. agency responsible for enforcing the DPF. The FTC has the authority to investigate and bring enforcement actions against companies that fail to comply with the DPF requirements. The FTC also provides guidance and resources to help companies understand and implement the DPF.

The DPF is a voluntary framework, meaning that companies can choose whether or not to join. However, companies that join the DPF are required to adhere to the DPF requirements, and the FTC has the authority to enforce these requirements.
