

The Data Privacy Framework (DPF) is a voluntary framework for U.S. companies that wish to transfer personal data from the United States to the European Union. The DPF is designed to provide a high level of protection for personal data, comparable to the standards set by the European Union's General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR). Companies that join the DPF are required to adhere to a set of principles and practices that govern the collection, use, and transfer of personal data. For more information, visit www.dataprivacyframework.gov/

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) is the primary federal agency responsible for enforcing the DPF. The FTC has the authority to investigate and bring enforcement actions against companies that violate the DPF. The FTC also provides guidance and resources to help companies understand and comply with the DPF.

The DPF is a voluntary framework, meaning that companies can choose whether or not to join. However, companies that join the DPF are required to adhere to the DPF's principles and practices. The DPF is designed to provide a high level of protection for personal data, comparable to the standards set by the European Union's GDPR.
